School of Law - Deputy Head of School

The LL.B (Hons) in Irish Law, the flagship programme offered by the School of Law, has recently been revalidated without conditions for a period of 5 years by the Higher Education and Training Awards Council (HETAC) and the University of Wales. The programme is also accredited by the Honorable Society of the King's Inns.

We now wish to recruit a Deputy Head in the School of Law who will work with and support the Head of School in providing academic leadership and management and in planning the future development of the School. The Deputy Head will also have programme leader and lecturing responsibilities and will have a particular responsibility in the School for academic quality and standards in teaching, learning and assessment, as well as the expansion of both undergraduate and postgraduate programme provision.

This is an important full time appointment to our academic management team. The person appointed will have excellent academic and professional qualifications in law, outstanding management and leadership skills and a good understanding of developments in the legal profession and in higher education, both in Ireland and internationally.

A competitive compensation package will reflect the seniority and responsibilities of the position and will be sufficient to attract applicants of the calibre required.
